Pet owners often face significant challenges when seeking veterinary care. These barriers can lead to delays in seeking necessary treatment, compromising the health and well-being of pets.

Expensive fees

Many initial consultation fees are prohibitive to owners, often costing £50 - 70. Driven by the number of independent practices being acquired by the 6 large corporates

Vet Well-being

Vets practices are becoming a pressurised environment for veterinary surgeons. Suicide rates are 4 x higher amongst vets vs the rest of the population

Limited Access

Some areas, particularly in rural or low-income communities, experience limited access to veterinary clinics or specialists.

Overpopulated Clinics

Since C19, the number of pets in the UK has risen dramatically. Resulting in lack of appointments and long waiting times.
